New Life, Responsibility & New Growth

Bentley has been experiencing some challenges with engagement in his program. After CCHO staff and outside supports worked together to identify his strengths and areas where he could use additional support, several interventions were developed to help encourage more positive engagement.

Â

One of those interventions is giving Bentley the opportunity to care for a plant in his room. This simple responsibility is designed to help him practice accountability, consistency, and caring for something beyond himself. When Bentley learned about the opportunity, he was excited and eager to take on the responsibility. He was given the opportunity to choose a plant that he connected with, within reason.

Â

When Bentley saw his new plant, his excitement continued! We are hopeful that this small responsibility will provide him with a meaningful opportunity to experience success, build confidence, and practice making positive choices. Weâ€™re excited to see how this little plantâ€™ and the responsibility that comes with caring for itâ€™ can help Bentley grow.
